Make: Like the Pioneers is an enjoyable read with plenty of useful information. Personally, I found most of the information useful for emergency or camping situations rather than for home use. The fire bow drill was my favorite chapter by far because as living near the mountains with frequent power outages and freezing temperatures I certainly have a need for this basic knowledge.

The hard-working pioneers had to be resourceful and learn how to make their own soap from wood ashes and waste fats. They realized it's easy to craft soap using the overflowing amount of hardwood ashes that built up in their daily fires, along with the ample amount of animal fat from the butchering of livestock they used for food.
